

CONCRETE CONTAINMENT STRUCTURES MAINTENANCE and REPAIR

Manufacturers, Distributors and Application Contractors

Many of the concrete containment structures required for liquid fertilizer and pesticide storage at Wisconsin dealerships are more than a dozen years old now. With age, some have cracked and deteriorated to the point where they may no longer be liquid-tight. Products suitable for repairing and maintaining these structures under the harsh prevailing conditions are rarely found at the local hardware store. However, a wide variety of industrial grade products are available from a small network of specialty manufacturers and distributors. The department compiled this list to help make it a little easier to find the right product or service.

At this time, the department doesn't endorse or approve any concrete repair products or services. Those listed have indicated that they can provide a product or service suitable for some agrichemical applications. Always check for specific chemical compatibility before choosing any product.

The list is not all-inclusive and it may become out-dated. We will try to keep it current and would appreciate any information to improve its accuracy. We'd also be interested in any feedback regarding effective products you have used. Be sure to keep records of products used so you can keep track of their performance. Please contact Matt Laak, containment engineer in the department's Containment and Remediation

Section, at (608) 224-4518, to discuss repair problems and share experiences that may help someone else.
